

Hellion-the fire beast

The monster burst from the trees leaving a trail of destruction and fire behind it. "RUN" I screamed at the villagers before drawing my sword. I said to myself the same thing that I said at the start of every battle you can do this. I examined the body of this creature for a weak spot all I saw was: a beast twice as tall as me, with fire for a body. Its hands could generate fire balls that it could throw. It wasn't even on fire it just was fire, no body underneath just flames. It had huge muscles and could easily have thrown a car. Its legs were thicker than tree trunks and were powerful. My only hope of winning was to make him fall in water. It lunged forwards at me. I rolled to one side to avoid the blow. This was going to be difficult.

